Tennyson's "Idylls of the King" has delighted many of us since childhood with its tales of knights and chivalry, and with its beauty of image. In it we have found haughty and humble characters passing in pageant-like array before our very eyes—knights riding forth to tournaments, and beautiful ladies smiling amid the fragrance of white flowers. We have seen image after image flash at the suggestion of enchanted words—youths kneeling at the altar to bow allegiance to their king; spring-time loveliness changing to the barren brownness of autumn. And for some of us this has been enough. To have our minds diverted by romantic tales, or to drink at the fountain of aesthetic pleasures, has been our delight in the "Idylls." Yet, in this poetic story of the Round Table, which seems "like a chronicle illuminated by saintly hands, and often blazes with light like that which flashed from the holy wizard's book when the covers were unclasped," are to be found deeper wells of meaning than are suggested by its external features. An allegorical significance diffuses itself throughout the tales. To relate this allegory to our lives as college students is what the theme of this yearbook purposes to do.

Looking through the vista of allegory, we see Arthur, the ideal king, with his youthful followers clothed in burnished mail, and the venerable sage, Merlin, not as mere creations of the imagination necessary to a story of chivalry, but as symbols of life, while Camelot itself is something more than a city of lofty spires wherein is found the far-famed court of the king. It symbolizes civilization with its architecture, its sculpture, its poetry, and its sciences—with its host of influences both good and bad. Built to music, which is the harmony created by an effective combination of its elements, Camelot—or civilization—is never built at all as a permanent thing, but is eternally in the process of becoming, is everlastingly changed by the succeeding centuries. Ruled over by Arthur, man's higher-self, it gleams radiant with the splendor of the ideal. And present-day youths, like those of countless past generations, seeing its spires pricking through the mists, draw near to question Merlin who guards its gateway. He, a venerable sage, symbolic of human knowledge—philosophy, art, and science—declares in solemn tones:

“So thou pass
Beneath this archway, then wilt thou become
A thrall to his enchantment, for the King
Will bind thee by such vows, as is a shame
A man should not be bound by, yet the which
No man can keep; but, so thou dread to swear,
Pass not beneath this gateway, but abide
Without, among the cattle of the field.”

“There,” continues Merlin, “you can never know the eternal reality, the king; but, since the shining turrets of the city alone will be visible to you, you will become fascinated by their enchanting gleam, and look upon them as the ideal beauty in life. Yet, I warn you, their splendor is a mere external glamour, deceiving you with its apparent reality—which is, in truth, evanescent, unworthy of admiration and veneration. Yours is the choice—will you pay homage to the golden idol of materialism, or will you dedicate yourself to the king, your higher nature?"

College, like Merlin, the symbol of human understanding, invites youth to enter Camelot, to learn of its culture, its arts and sciences, and to use this knowledge in perfecting civilization. But it also warns them, as did the wizard of the Arthurian legend, that the material features of civilization are ephemeral, that the "king" alone is eternal.

Some youths, upon hearing this great truth, pledge themselves to seek only those things which have enduring values. Many, however, like the knights of Arthur's court, soon weary of the long struggle for inner perfection, and, like the knights, abandon their king, their higher-selves, to follow "wandering fires" and to become lost in treacherous quagmires. Vainly selfish, and desiring only personal gain, they spur on to superficial popularity, uncertain fame, and rewards of gold. Often in their frantic chase they pass true values, sometimes unaware of their existence, sometimes deliberately ignoring them. If unchecked in their mad quests, they, like those ambition-fired knights of the Round Table, forsake their king—lose sight of the Ideal. And, "taking true for false, or false for true" they find the world but a hollow sphere resounding with the echoes of its own futility; and finally they cry:

"It was my duty to have loved the highest;
It surely was my profit had I known;
It would have been my pleasure had I seen.
We needs must love the highest when we see it."

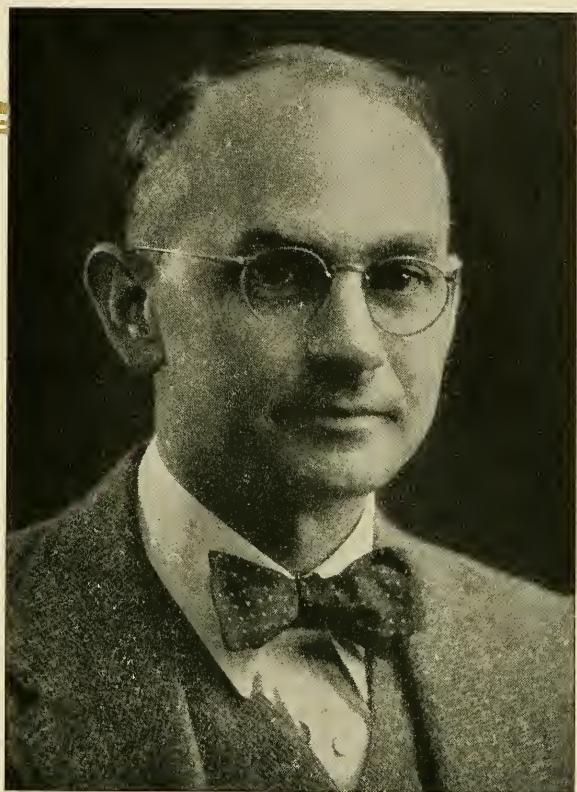

To help youth to avoid the fate of groping in a heavy darkness unilluminated by the ideal, hopelessly groping until they utter similar cries of remorse, is the intent of college. And its classes and laboratories, its social and academic events, its associations and its ponderous volumes of human knowledge are valuable only as they inspire youth so to live that it may say:

"I needs must love the highest,
for I have seen it."

Marshall Olin Lanphear

In the first part of the Seventeenth Century, a sturdy Anglo-Saxon people came to New England and pitted their lives against her harsh climate and niggardly soil. Theirs were the ancient ideals of hard work, thrift, self-reliance, self-discipline, courage, humility, moral integrity, and loyalty to king, to country, and to God. They were a level-headed race, wise with the wisdom of common sense, and apt to express it in taciturn and pungent speech. Not insensible to the beauty of their hills, to the procession of the seasons, and to the glory of the heavens by day and night, they distrusted the speech of facile emotions and preferred to weave their inspirations into the fabric of their lives.

About the year 1640 a group of these pioneers settled at Windsor, Connecticut; and it is to this middle-class English stock that Marshall Lanphear traces his American ancestry. He was born at Windsor, November 26, 1894. He attended the public schools of his native town and entered the Massachusetts Agricultural College in 1914. In 1921 he was recalled to the College to serve as Instructor in Agronomy; in 1924 he attained the rank of Assistant Professor, and in 1926 became Assistant Dean of the College. Such is a brief record of the outer life of this man.

Like most Freshmen, he probably entered College immersed in a haze of nebulous ideals. If, as the months passed, a growing shadow of doubt and disillusionment crept across his soul's horizon it was not immediately expressed. Through four years he faithfully follows the prescribed routine of class-room and laboratory; but with graduation there comes a full awakening and a sharp inner rebulsion. Like that other Yankee, Henry Adams, he realizes that he has been trained but not educated. He feels that behind the clutter of facts and names and statistics and vocational empiricism, there exists a vitalizing and organic whole. So he sets himself to the work of philosophical synthesis. The lines of advance had been laid down by his former studies and for him, as for many another scientifically-trained student, the doctrine of evolution became the Ariadne-thread through the labyrinth of facts.

Slowly his universe takes on form, and fact after fact drops into its natural place in the pattern of existence. He traverses space with the astronomers, and witnesses the genesis and dissolution of worlds; he broods over the geological story, and traces the unfolding drama of life from protozoön to man; he follows the revelations of the archaeologist's spade; he sees the cyclic rise and fall of ancient cultures and beholds the mutability of institutions and philosophies—till finally he stands on the topmost stair of the ages, faced with the spectacle of his own civilization moving swiftly along the ancient way which is so distressingly familiar to the student of history. It seems to him that if beginners in college could be shown something of the organic nature of knowledge, they might be saved from the sense of confusion and vague drifting with which he has been so painfully familiar. Furthermore, with some understanding of the serious issues at stake, they might be moved to set their trained minds and wills and hands to cooperate with the positive forces of evolution. He has come to realize that the easy reform which alters only externals is but a futile gesture, and that only sterling integrity of character can bring to triumphant consummation the high American ideal of which his ancestors dreamed.

So, experimenting, revising, reorganizing, in accord with his growing understanding and the progressive liberalizing of college policy, his course for beginners evolves from Freshman Agriculture to the singularly vital Freshman Orientation, while the work of the Dean's Office serves as an additional mode of contact with the student body. That something of his high purpose and sacrificial effort is understood and appreciated by the students is evidenced by the dedication of this book.

His ancestors would have regarded as "unseemly" any attempt to set forth his virtues more precisely or to penetrate further in the reticences of his character. It is sufficient to say that ancestral ideals may live again in the descendants of a people, and that Marshall Olin Lanphear is no unworthy son of his fathers.

HONOR COUNCIL

“WE, the students of the Massachusetts State College, believe that the goal of education is character. The man of character deals fairly with himself and with others and would rather suffer failure than stoop to fraud. The Honor System stands for this attitude in all relations of the students with the faculty. In expression of our beliefs we pledge ourselves to support the Constitution of the Honor System.”

Because of a belief in the truth of the above statement, the students of this campus have for many years been conducting examinations according to the honor system. The success or failure of our honor system rests to a great degree on the work of the Honor Council. Through the influence of the Council upon incoming students and through the work of the Council in keeping all students interested in the success of the system, the honor system has become an integral and valuable part of our college training.

Honor Council members are elected by the four classes.

MAROON KEY

THE MAROON KEY is a chapter of a national honorary society. Its members are elected each year by the sophomore class to serve as active members during that year.

The main duty of Maroon Key members is that of meeting visiting teams or other visiting organizations and of acting as host to such visitors during their stay with us. The society endeavors to help the visitors in every way possible and to make them enjoy their stay on campus.

Each spring the Maroon Key gives a formal dance, the "Mardi Gras," which is one of the season's major social events.

The insignia of the organization is a gold key with a maroon "M" set upon a white background.

WOMEN'S STUDENT GOVERNMENT ASSOCIATION

THE WOMEN'S STUDENT GOVERNMENT ASSOCIATION is the one organization to which all the women belong. Each year the association elects an executive council which has a twofold purpose, disciplinary and social. In its former capacity it enforces rules and endeavors to maintain a high standard of conduct among Massachusetts State College women. In its second capacity it sponsors teas and entertainments; in the fall it assists the freshmen to make their adjustments to college environment.

THE NEWMAN CLUB

THE NEWMAN CLUB was founded at Mass. State College in November, 1929, by Rev. Fr. Sheedy, pastor of St. Brigid's Church at that time, in an effort to draw together the Roman Catholic students on the campus in an organization of mutual interest. During the past year the club has become affiliated with the National Federation of Catholic Clubs of America. The purpose of the organization is to bring to the campus outstanding members of the clergy and Catholic laymen, in meetings open to the entire campus. During the past college year, Dr. Cortlandt van Winkle of Smith College delivered an address on "Some Aspects of the Liturgical Revival," Dr. Terrence L. Connolly of Boston College spoke on "The Life and Works of Francis Thompson," and Dr. Joseph J. Riley, S.J., of Hunter College delivered the annual Newman lecture.

Y. W. C. A.

THE YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION has attempted to provide an opportunity for its members "to realize full and creative lives through a growing knowledge of God." Its program has included an active participation, through the United Religious Council, in the sponsoring of the major religious events of the year, but particular emphasis has been placed upon the organization of small groups meeting regularly for discussion and original work in poetry, dramatics, music, world education, and for Sunday afternoon retreats. Through the sending of delegates to the Northfield Conference and to Maqua, the summer camp, and special programs held during the year, the organization has sought to supplement the regular campus activities.

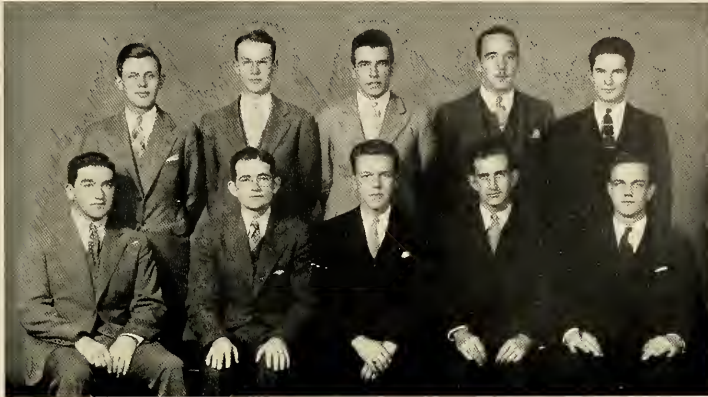

MENORAH SOCIETY

IN March, 1934, the Jewish students on the campus organized the Menorah Society as a religious and cultural organization. The officers elected were: Max Dubin '35, president; Henry Epstein '35, vice-president; and Florence Bilsky '36, secretary. Dr. Maxwell Goldberg is the adviser of the society. The aim of the Menorah Society is to "put its members in contact with all the romance and poignancy of Jewish traditions, with all the inquiring activity of modern Jewish effort, with all the science and art that is building the Jewish future."

During the past year, in its discussions and meetings, the Society has been addressed by several prominent speakers, and has shown that its re-establishment on this campus was a sound and worthwhile venture.

THE CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

IN CONJUNCTION with the United Religious Council the Christian Association has actively supported all major religious activities on campus. Its membership is divided into three groups for the furtherance of deputations, social service, and Bible study. Five of its members attended a ten-day conference held at Camp Becket last summer, delegates were sent to conferences at Yale and at the Sophia Smith Homestead in Hatfield. Five others went as representatives to a conference held at Northfield in February.

MILITARY BALL

MILITARY BALL opened the winter social season on December eighth at Drill Hall. Ed Murphy's orchestra gave the dancers an evening of enjoyable music. The main feature of the evening was the grand march, led by Colonel Romeyn. The hall was decorated as a campfire scene. Green boughs along the walls, dim overhead lights, and a pup tent in a corner gave the scene an appropriate atmosphere.

The chaperones included the members of the college staff of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps. The committee, which was largely responsible for the success of the affair, consisted of Albert Burgess, chairman, Curtis Clark, Fred Corcoran, William Muller, Benjamin Wihry, and Norvin Laubenstein.

MARDI GRAS

THE MAROON KEY presented a most successful dance on the twenty-first of March. Web Maxton and Vin Gary furnished the music, alternating with every three numbers. Drill Hall was attractively decorated with green and white, in keeping with St. Patrick's Day. Shamrocks and harps were placed about the walls, and streamers were draped from the ceiling. On the south wall were the class numerals and the society's symbol, a large maroon key. The orchestras, surrounded by foliage, played from opposite corners of the hall.

The members of the committee deserve much credit for the success of the occasion. They were D. P. Rossiter, C. P. Swanson, F. M. Lyon, W. A. Leighton, Jr., P. D. Layton, J. F. Cutter, R. W. Thorndike, J. A. Tuttle, and R. L. Spiller.

THE OUTING CLUB

WITH the increasing interest in all phases of recreation and especially in the Outing Club idea, an association of college outing clubs has come into prominence. This association, known as the Intercollegiate Outing Club Association, was begun by Dartmouth Outing Club. Its objects are to stimulate outdoor activity in colleges, to form new college outing clubs, and to allow existing clubs to exchange ideas. The Massachusetts State College Club became one of the first members.

The past year has been an active one for the Outing Club. In the spring there was a trip to Haystack and another to Mt. Greylock. Then a "thirty-mile hike" was held for the first time, the route being across the Holyoke Range, around Mt. Warner, over Mt. Sugarloaf, to the top of Mt. Toby, and down the Link Trail. Four members of the club attended the I. O. C. A. conference at Swanzey, New Hampshire.

At the opening meeting in the fall, Mr. Basil Wood talked on camping and tramping. On the following Sunday a group, consisting mostly of freshmen and newcomers to the college, enjoyed a hike to Mt. Toby. On Columbus Day a trip was made to Mt. Greylock. As the season advanced, several hikes were made to the Pelham Hills.

PHYSICS CLUB

THE PHYSICS CLUB has been meeting once a month during the winter and spring of this year. With the helpful cooperation of the department, many interesting subjects have been discussed, and papers have been presented by members of the club at these meetings. Among the titles of papers presented were "Production of Low Temperatures and Related Phenomena," "Topics in Radio Theory and Receiver Construction," and "Production and Application of X-rays." In order that the topics may be of interest to all, membership is restricted to students taking advanced courses in the department. After each meeting light refreshments are enjoyed. During the social hour music is furnished by various orchestras, with the aid of victrola records and amplifier. Alfred Newton is president of the club for this year.

LANDSCAPE CLUB

THE LANDSCAPE CLUB is made up of all the landscape students who are interested in getting a little more in their field than just what the various courses offer. Professors in the department and outside speakers are heard at the meetings. Through the club, the members come in contact with men in the profession and with some of the work that has been done. One of the most important events of the club this year was a spring dance.

K. O. CLUB

THE "Karry On Club" is made up of former 4-H Club members who still have an interest in club work. Its object is "to promote interesting Junior Extension work from the leader's standpoint, and to keep the 4-H Club spirit alive among college students." Meetings are held monthly in the new Farley 4-H clubhouse. This building was constructed in the summer of 1934 with money raised by 4-H Club workers and their friends.

The K. O. Club was organized in 1927 by a group of co-eds and enlarged in 1929 to allow men students to join. The adviser is George L. Farley, State Club Leader.

The officers for this year are:

President	Frank Kingsbury '38
Vice-President	Lillian Jackson '37
Secretary	Kathleen Fletcher '38

ANIMAL HUSBANDRY CLUB

THE ANIMAL HUSBANDRY CLUB presents to students majoring in animal husbandry the opportunity of meeting men from various parts of New England who are leaders in their particular branch of agriculture. During the winter months regular meetings are held at which economists, scientists, journalists, and men in the practical field address the group on various pertinent agricultural topics, many of which prove to be of much value to the students. In this way the Animal Husbandry Club helps to bring about a balance between social, practical, and theoretical problems; and in the past it has afforded the students the opportunity of making contacts that have been of great value to them after graduation.

DAIRY CLUB

THE DAIRY CLUB, organized in 1933, sponsors regular meetings throughout the college year for the purpose of creating a stronger department of dairy science by bringing together the students majoring in this field. Outside speakers are secured as often as possible who address the Club on matters pertaining to chemistry, bacteriology, economics, or some other phase of dairy science. The meetings of the organization are thus instrumental in bringing students in contact with the active workers in the field of dairying, and it is hoped that all who are interested in the production and distribution of milk and milk products will attend the meetings.

FERNALD ENTOMOLOGY CLUB

WITH the purpose of keeping students in touch with the most recent advances in the field of entomology, the Fernald Entomology Club was founded January 4, 1925, and named in honor of Dr. Henry T. Fernald, at that time head of the Department of Entomology and internationally recognized as an entomologist. Its aim is accomplished in three different ways: by speakers giving reviews of recent literature, by discussion of field problems and experiences, and by talks delivered by prominent entomologists who visit the college.

Meetings are held once a month, with interpolated meetings at various times when it is possible to obtain a speaker of note. Under the auspices of the club, prominent visiting entomologists often give informal talks to the students. Membership is voluntary for all junior and senior students majoring in entomology, while guests and other students are cordially invited to attend. This seminar is one of the required courses of the Graduate School. Its primary purpose is the review of recent literature and the presentation of completed theses.

The Fernald Club Yearbook is published annually by the Club and contains much of interest to graduates of this college now doing work in entomology and to other interested entomologists. The Yearbook and the Club are conducted entirely by students who show great interest in the advancement of these activities.

PRESS CLUB

THE Massachusetts State College Press Club is an organization composed of students reporting State College news to various papers throughout the state, and of persons employed by the college in writing news. Its purpose is to facilitate the dissemination of college news and to further the theoretical and practical journalistic endeavors of the correspondents.

The Press Club is formed in conjunction with the College News Service. It aids the News Service in gathering information and in turn receives all news releases sent out from that office.

Since its organization last October the Press Club has visited newspaper plants in Boston, Springfield and Greenfield, and has heard speeches by college officials, qualified newspaper men and news editors at other colleges. Exercises in journalistic improvement have been carried on under the direction of the College News Editor.

HISTORY-SOCIOLOGY CLUB

THE club was organized last year to permit students majoring in history and sociology to supplement the courses now offered in these subjects.

Informal meetings have been held every three weeks. Guest speakers have discussed interesting topics and experiences, and students have read papers on international relations and on original research work in sociology. The club has received the publications and books distributed by the Carnegie Foundation which sponsors the International Relations Club. At present there are twenty-five members in the club.

HOME ECONOMICS CLUB

THE purpose of the Home Economics Club is to develop a professional interest among the girls, to bring them in touch with women in the field and with the national organizations, and to cultivate friendships among the students and members of this department.

Meetings are usually held once a month in the Homestead and programs of interest are presented. Any girl majoring in home economics is eligible for membership.

CORNER STONE EXERCISES

IN services held Saturday morning, November 3, 1934, Gov. Joseph B. Ely, president of the board of trustees of the college, laid the corner-stone of the Goodell Library, and that of Thatcher Hall was laid by Nathaniel I. Bowditch, vice-president of the board.

With Pres. Hugh P. Baker presiding, exercises at Thatcher Hall began at ten o'clock. Addresses were given by the Hon. Charles P. Howard, chairman of the State Commission on Administration and Finance, and Henry Lefavour, Chairman of the Massachusetts Emergency Public Works Commission, formerly president of Simmons College.

In his address, Mr. Howard paid high tribute to the life of Dr. Roscoe Wilfred Thatcher, former president of the college and in whose honor the new dormitory is named, and pointed out that it was through the efforts of Dr. Thatcher that the physical education building was built and North College remodeled and renovated.

"In view of President Thatcher's constant interest in the housing problem," said Mr. Howard in closing, "it is particularly fitting that this beautiful new dormitory for students should bear his name. Its architecture, of the colonial type, is, in its simplicity, strength, and harmony, typical of the simpleness of mind and heart, of the rugged strength and the well-rounded harmony of that true friend and servant of humanity, Roscoe Wilfred Thatcher."

President Baker also presided at the Goodell Library exercises and introduced Governor Ely, Dr. Kenyon L. Butterfield, president of the college from 1906 to 1924, and Charles H. Gould of the class of 1916, who were the main speakers.

"The state recognizes this college as one of the great institutions of the state," said Governor Ely, "and proposes to give it the facilities that will keep it great as an educational institution. To emphasize this feeling of the commonwealth, to express the appreciation of the commonwealth and her people for the sort of education that is being given here, I am here today. Education only reaching a certain point is dangerous, but education pursued as it should be to the fuller knowledge and understanding of the relations of men to each other is the salvation of our civilization, and it is to the perpetuation of that idea that this corner-stone has been laid firmly and solidly and constructively today."

Former President Butterfield spoke of the efforts of Dr. Henry H. Goodell, both as librarian and president of the college, to build a library of which the college is justly proud. "For fourteen years he was the librarian of the college and its leading spirit for a longer period. It was his belief that the library is the pivot on which the college turns, and should be the very center of college life. Not only is it a place for required reading and assigned work, but it is a part of the campus for recreational relaxation. The atmosphere should be one in which the students are able to concentrate easily, thus making the tasks interesting and appealing."

HORTICULTURAL SHOW

THE ANNUAL HORTICULTURAL SHOW, which is now held each fall in the huge cage of the Physical Education building, is one of the most outstanding events of the college year. More than 12,000 people attended this year's three-day show, and the occasion commanded wide attention through the newspapers of the whole state.

The first flower show at the college was held in Wilder Hall in 1908 under the direction of former Professor E. A. White of the Floriculture Department whose purpose was to better acquaint the students with varieties of flowers which could be grown in this vicinity. The following year the show was taken to French Hall and continued there until 1932. Since that time it has been held in the cage of the Physical Education building.

Under the general supervision of the Department of Landscape Architecture, the show this year was arranged on the plan of a large formal garden. At the terminus of a long central aisle, bordered with chrysanthemums backed by an evergreen hedge, rose a huge white pylon of modernistic design set off against a background of hemlock. This feature was designed by James Robertson, Jr., instructor in the department.

The two cross aisles, which constituted the minor axes of the show, had as terminal features small formal gardens, each containing some striking central object. These gardens were designed separately by Edward D. Masters '35, John P. Veerling '35, William A. Scott '35, Daniel J. Foley '35, and E. Lawrence Packard '35.

A realistic forest scene designed by the Forestry Department was lighted to give the effect of sunset against a scenic background of hills "Beyond Toby" painted by Stephen L. Hamilton '31. The Pomology Department featured a large map of Massachusetts composed of cranberries against a background of red and green apples. A formal exhibit of squash was presented by the Department of Vegetable Gardening. The offering of the Department of Horticultural Manufactures was a huge model of an apple, recessed to show different uses that are made of this fruit.

Formal and informal garden exhibits arranged by students were an important part of the show. An exhibit entitled "Penthouse Nook," designed by William Schlaefler '35, placed first in the formal competition, and Adin Hixon '36 won second prize for his garden, called "Terminus." In the informal competition Lawrence Packard and George Simmons '35 were awarded first place for their exhibit of a "Woodland Waterfall," and the exhibit of Benjamin Wihry '35 and Kenneth Steadman '35 entitled "Swamp Scene" placed second.

Displays by commercial exhibitors added greatly to the show; but, in the main, the success of the show is attributable to the efforts of the student committee headed by Emil J. Trampusch '35. This committee was assisted by an advisory faculty board, including Clark L. Thayer, floriculture, chairman; Robert P. Holdsworth, forestry; Cecil C. Rice, horticultural manufactures; Frank A. Waugh, landscape architecture; Grant B. Snyder, vegetable gardening; and Fred C. Sears, pomology.

FACULTY CURRICULUM COMMITTEE

IN December of 1933, President Baker appointed a faculty committee to study the curriculum. This year, the committee, under the chairmanship of Assistant Dean Lanphear, has submitted a report in which some changes and many modifications in the present curriculum are recommended.

The committee's statement of objectives of the curriculum, which appears at the beginning of the report, is of interest. After noting the increasing student population and the wider field of interest evident in this population, the committee stated the objective of the college as consisting of five parts: growth in mentality and character, training for productive work, health training, social training, and recreational training.

The committee said that growth in mentality and character should be fostered by presenting to the student at least an introduction to the fields of physical and biological science, psychology, social science, history, philosophy, English, and the fine arts. Such a purpose calls for a revision of the system of required courses and also for greater departmental unity. The departments were found well organized within themselves but poorly integrated with other departments. This situation, the committee said, must be changed, if the student is to obtain a broad educational background.

It is the opinion of the committee that training for productive work is necessary since most of our students feel that it is essential to find work as soon as possible after graduation. Narrow vocationalism is to be avoided, but the curriculum should be arranged so that it is possible for students to master one subject well enough to use that subject in his vocation. In connection with this objective, the committee suggests the addition of new major fields to relieve the congestion in the few popular majors we now have.

The remaining objectives of training in health and in social and recreational activities are concerned with fitting the student for a more wholesome and enjoyable participation in the workings of the social order. It is the major purpose of the committee, however, to see not only that these objectives are carried out, but also that they are properly correlated and unified in the student's mind. As the report states: "If the college has an objective for the individual student, then each course must further that objective in one way or another. Each course and each instructor thus plays a part in the development of an individual life. Herein lies the unity of our curriculum. It is that unity of action which we seem to lack at present."

"PREXY'S" CONVOCATION

ON FEBRUARY 14, President Baker, in his first scheduled convocation address, gave explanations about the aim of the college which were of great interest to the student body. The college, he said, must provide instruction for its students; it must, through experiment stations, engage in research work; by its extension work, it must and does provide adult education. President Baker also said that this college may become a state university, but that was not likely to occur during his lifetime. He went on to tell of problems which confront the administration, and of the difficulties of preparing a budget and having it approved. The students were glad to hear the President's opinions on such vital questions as the aims and trend of the college, and found his statements most encouraging.

"Arise, go forth and conquer as of old."

INTERFRATERNITY CUP

IN order to further the interest of fraternity men in the activities of the college and to place interfraternity competition on a more systematized basis, an Interfraternity Cup is awarded each year to that fraternity which has proved itself a leader in the fields of athletics, scholarship, and academic activities. Schedules are made for teams in touch football, soccer, track, baseball, swimming and other sports. The fraternity averages are used in awarding points for scholarship. As for the academic activities, points are awarded on the basis of competitions such as the interfraternity sing, the declamation contest, Dad's Day entertainment competition and other activities. At the end of each year the fraternity having the highest total score is awarded the cup for the following year. Inasmuch as the cup represents excellence in all fields of activity it is a sign of a well-rounded house, and competition for it is keen.

Fraternities which have won the cup are:

- 1931 Kappa Sigma
- 1932 Kappa Epsilon
- 1933 Kappa Sigma
- 1934 Theta Chi

INTERFRATERNITY COUNCIL

THE INTERFRATERNITY COUNCIL was organized with the purpose of correlating the activities of the several fraternities on campus in order to promote a feeling of good will and cooperation among the houses. The Council is made up of two representatives from each fraternity. Its members control such matters as rushing and pledging rules, banquet dates and other matters of general fraternity interest.

In addition to acting directly upon the fraternities, the Council cooperates with the various departments on campus by stimulating interest in athletics, scholarship, and academic activities. The point system and the arrangements for various contests pertaining to the Interfraternity Cup are made by the Council in conjunction with faculty representatives. By this system of controlled competition a better relationship is established not only among the fraternities themselves, but also between the fraternities and the college departments.

The Council has an annual spring banquet, and last year it very successfully introduced one more cooperative function, the Interfraternity Ball. Last year the dance was such a success that it is to be repeated this spring, and the Interfraternity Ball seems destined to become one of the traditional campus functions.

INTERSORORITY COUNCIL

THE INTERSORORITY COUNCIL is composed of two women from each sorority, from which a president and secretary-treasurer are elected, who call meetings once a month to act upon affairs of common interest to all the sororities. Since its organization in October, 1931, the Council has done much each year towards establishing sororities on a firm basis.

One of the Council's main purposes is the regulation of the athletic, social, and academic phases of college life which concern sororities. Every year an Intersorority Cup is awarded to the sorority attaining the greatest number of points in a series of competitions—academic, athletic, and scholastic—held during the year.

In April the Intersorority Council holds a formal dance, one of the outstanding social events of the college year.

INTERSORORITY CUP

THE INTERSORORITY TROPHY, awarded to the sorority having the greatest number of points in academics, scholarship, and athletics during the year, was given for the first time on May 12, 1934. Lambda Delta Mu was the winner for the year.

This year advancements were made in the competition program, with the addition of an Intersorority Sing, a Declamation Contest, and house inspection to academics, and several sports, as swimming and rifle, to athletics. Non-sorority girls may form a group and compete for the trophy if they so desire.

The competition for the Intersorority Cup has been keen and has revealed much enthusiasm and sorority spirit. The purpose of the trophy is to maintain a friendly attitude among the sororities, and to encourage successful work in certain activities.
